

On 6-20-2001, Diane got the following email:

□ Dear Diane,

I'm currently in the process of selecting next week's "Bio of the Week" for our site www.FilmStew.com. I have viewed your bio and visited your site, and would like to know if you would be interested in being "Bio of The Week" for the following week at www.FilmStew.com. If you are interested in being "Bio of The Week", would it be possible to update your bio with some of the great details you have on your site?

Please me with your response at your earliest convenience. Thank you.

Sincerely,

Mario Giron

Diane sent him the bio and received this response:

Thanks, that looked great!! I have one of my writers going over it right now. Once he's done, I will update your bio and notify you. Once you approve your new bio, I will schedule it for this following week's Bio of The Week. Your bio will be on Monday's Newsletter, which is viewed by thousands of our members, and on our main page of Bios as our Bio of the Week. In addition, your bio is also archived in our Bio of the Week Archives, so as to be seen by visitors who want to see previous Bios of the Week. Finally, as an added bonus, you get a happy face for all your great help. Thanks.

Mario G.
